CALL FOR CONFERENCE PAPERS

5th ICEFB - 2023 "Achieving Sustainable Development Goals: From Promise to Reality"

In the face of profound challenges such as climate change, income inequality, depletion of natural resources, human rights issues, fair working conditions, pollution, racial injustice, and gender inequality at a global scale, individuals, organizations, and nations need to think differently and act differently. Developing sustainably is the only responsible and effective strategy for any organization be it in the public or private sector and for-profit or not-for-profit. The answer to the 'How and What to Do' part of developing sustainable strategies can be found in the UN Sustainable Development Goals which provide a critical framework for strategies that profitable growth while addressing a range of social needs including education, health, social protection, and job opportunities, climate change and environmental protection. Though the sustainable development goals which are essentially a call to action for every nation on the planet to promote prosperity while protecting the planet were proposed by the United Nations in 2015 to be achieved by 2030, the world has little to show that these promises are transforming into reality even after seven years.

In today's world which is witnessing calamitous events whether they are extreme climatic conditions, acute food shortages, rampant human rights violations, gender inequality, etc., are happening with sickening regularity, organizations are still debating whether to incorporate sustainability in their business strategy. There is a pressing need for value-driven frameworks for developing business strategies that not only provide profitable growth but also help address some of the world's most pressing problems. Fortunately, a significant amount of management research is currently focused on sustainability and sustainable development goals which is having a positive societal impact. To bring forth current research on these topics and disseminate it for the greater good, Vignana Jyothi Institute of Management, Hyderabad is organizing the 5th International Conference in the 'Impact of Current Events on the Future of Business' series on the theme 'Achieving Sustainable Development Goals: From Promise to Reality'.

PRE-CONFERENCE WORKSHOP ON “QUALITATIVE RESEARCH USING NVivo”

27th April 2023

The popularity of qualitative research has grown over time. To gain a deeper understanding of the structures, processes, and perspectives that underlie or influence human behaviour, qualitative research collects and conducts in-depth analyses of observations, interviews, and other records of human activity. It is crucial that the researcher thoroughly understands the methodology and its foundations and adopt a systematic approach to data analysis to ensure quality and rigor. NVivo is a powerful program for analyzing qualitative and mixed-methods data such as text, audio, video, surveys, and social media. This workshop focuses on developing skills in quick project design, data storage and organization, data investigation and conceptualization, querying, nodes, coding, data interrogation, and data visualization.

The objective of this program is

- ◆ To understand the structure of Nvivo and how to use it as part of the research process.

Contents

- ◆ Basic of NVivo - Navigating through the software.
- ◆ Using NVivo for literature review.
- ◆ Data preparation, import, and organization.
- ◆ Organising and visualizing codes.
- ◆ Text mining using NVivo.
- ◆ Thematic analysis in NVivo.
- ◆ Content analysis using NVivo.
